Most young people under 25 are never married, regardless of their education level or income group. Even among high-income and highly educated youth, only a small share are ma

Across all genders, incomes, and education levels, most young people are not in a partnered relationship. Partnered rates are slightly higher among females and those with more advanced education, but still remain low overall.

Average anxiety levels for people under 25 spiked sharply around 2021. Since then, anxiety has gradually declined and reached its lowest point in 2024.
